I. For the section on the USSR, S/CST suggests the following:

1. On page 20, under 1, National Economic Planning, inserting the following item:

Recent developments in Eastern Europe which threaten Soviet hegemony in the area have been, and may continue to be, met with increasing commitments of Soviet military manpower for reoccupation purposes. If so, will such commitments affect the demobilization of military manpower? How will any such changes in the program for demobilization be felt in the allocation of civilian manpower between the efforts of construction and production? (U)

2. Retain item 1.b., page 20. (U)
3. On page 23, under 5. Transportation:

4. On page 26, under 11. Construction, the following items to be inserted in the following order:

a. Construction of 27 new cement plants, mostly in eastern USSR, is crucial to the achievement of cement production goals in the 6th Five Year Plan. To what extent are the Soviets meeting their time schedule for putting such new cement plants into operation? Identification, location, and progress of construction on these 27 projects is not yet complete. (U)

b. Cement production has lagged badly through most of 1956. (U) Has this resulted in a change in priority allocations of cement for particular types of construction? Has this affected new construction projects in the eastern regions, or any other area? (C)

What changes are likely in Poland's long-range economic planning as a result of the recent change in leadership? Note any significant modifications in the pattern of investment and construction priorities. (U)

Recent statements by Gomułka point up the seriousness of the housing shortage in Poland. Is there evidence that second five year plan goals for housing construction have been increased as a result of the new policy of liberalization? Will an increase in housing construction goals be implemented by an increase in total planned investment or by a re-allocation of planned investment? (U)

H. ROMANIA

1. Under item 2, page 82, the following requirement to be added:
Will the recent satellite unrest result in changes in priorities in investment and construction designed to increase living standards? What adjustments to overall economic plans will be required to implement such a policy. (U)
2. Retain items 2.e., (C) 2.f., (C). page 83
